

IN AN AMERICAN STRAND:

John J. McDermott Memorial Celebration and Symposium

"The nectar is in the journey."

October 4th and 5th | Texas A&M University | Open to all

INVITATION AND CALL FOR PAPERS

This celebratory symposium seeks informal narratives, pedagogical approaches, and traditional academic papers addressing McDermott's work and its impact. Any papers that address McDermott's pedagogy or scholarly publications are welcome. Potential topics include McDermott's work on existentialism, medical humanities, disability, urban aesthetics, philosophy of culture, pedagogy, and his contributions to reviving American philosophy as a discipline. If you wish to submit a paper please send an abstract to Charles Carlson at charlescarlson@tamu.edu.

The event will include a gathering of former students, colleagues, and friends for a reception on Friday. Saturday will be a symposium on McDermott's work and legacy, and will conclude with a reception at the McDermott Library.

For more information and to RSVP to attend please contact Charles at the email address above, click this link, or use the QR code.
